

Internship - Peer Video

Summary: This document contains guidelines on how to submit your peer video.

Chapter I

General Instructions

Peer evaluation is necessary to validate any internship project:

You must submit a presentation video of your internship period, uploaded to a website like YouTube, Dailymotion, etc., and include the link in a file named "video" in your Git repository.

The goal of the video is to provide a short presentation of what happened during your internship. The video must last 4 to 5 minutes. It must include a presentation using any tool at your disposal (PowerPoint, Prezi, Keynote...), and a frame containing your face, or even better, your full body. An introduction/conclusion where you appear alone is acceptable.

This video must be as professional as a presentation in front of the administration council of a major company.

You will be graded on the quality of your slides, your demeanour, the overall quality of the video, and its execution.

The content must adhere to the following rules:

- A new member is joining the administration council: you need to explain the company's overall context, its specific context, the challenges, the content, and the results of your internship project(s).
- The new member must be able to understand what you're explaining.
- Looking to promote people internally, the administration council is here to listen to YOU. It is important that you demonstrate your involvement in the project and showcase your qualities (both technical and otherwise).

Note: Evaluations for the peer video can be completed asynchronously. There is no meeting between the student being evaluated and the reviewer. A campus may locally override this rule and organise evaluations differently.
